Moderated by Mark Bertler, the event's featured participants include G. Anders Hallsby, Will Sarni, Nicole Neeman Brady, and Tom Freyberg. Sans powerpoint, pitches, or presentations, the moderated discussion offers an opportunity for attendees to learn about investment trends and opportunities relating to water/wastewater, spanning agriculture, conservation, buildings, industry, utilities, and financial services.

This is part of a larger effort to drive syndication amongst investors with a collaborative mindset and some focus on investment opportunities relating to water/wastewater.

Details and Sign-up

What's your thesis, what's your strategy, and what trends do you find compelling?

ABOUT

Join us for a repartee-style webinar featuring Mazarine's network of investors who are also targeting some type of investment opportunity relating to water and/or wastewater. This series of quarterly roundtables continues to include a diverse group of investors who have some aspect of 'water' in their investment thesis.

AGENDA

After welcome remarks from the moderator, featured participants spend a few minutes introducing themselves, then via moderated discussion share their investment thesis, strategy, rationale behind one or two recent investments (or opportunities they are eyeing), and a broader discussion of trends.

FORMAT

This roundtable discussion is sans-powerpoint, and attendees should expect more of a discussion than pitches or presentations.

OBJECTIVE

Catalyze more syndication and collaboration amongst Mazarine's syndicate of investors who have a thesis that includes investment in innovations, utilities, or projects that include some aspect of water/wastewater. Many in the syndicate are investors who are new to 'water' and interested in some type of participation, including co-investment.

WHY

Learn about where and how 'water' focused managers are finding compelling investment opportunities in: agriculture/aquaculture, the built environment, conservation, financial services, heavy & light industry, and/or utilities. It will be recorded for those who cannot make the live session.
